

Nicholas G. McGee

The value of my internship is that I obtained experience and knowledge that I can use in future endeavors. The opportunity of this internship allowed me to become more acquainted with the Health Care field and, most importantly, work with some great and wonderful people.

Yes, you have to love what you do in your job, and work with people you like. When you do find an amazing group of people to work with, like I have, you do not want to stop working. They have made me a part of their family and I am very thankful for that. It's like the old saying goes, the little things make the biggest difference and that is why I work hard for them. Knowing that I can help them and make a difference is a huge reward that no one can take away!
