Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends,

Last year at this time I noted the progress that was being made on the construction of the Recreation Center. We are now enjoying that wonderful new facility and all that it brings to our students. During the ribbon-cutting ceremony opening the building, a time capsule was placed in an interior wall so that 100 years from now others could glimpse at a moment in 2004. What did our students select to go into the capsule? A college catalog, a student’s parking ticket, a student ID and a tuition bill. More than twenty other items were included, but I dare not mention them all now lest I spoil a surprise for those opening the capsule in 2104!

I am pleased to report that, as one of only 214 national liberal arts colleges in the U.S., Lycoming continues to prepare our students broadly for their futures and that we do so with an emphasis on small classes taught by full-time, highly credentialed and experienced faculty. The College’s approach continues to garner attention from many external sources, a fact most recently illustrated by Lycoming’s inclusion in The Princeton Review’s publication, “Best Mid-Atlantic Colleges.”
Our students excel in many areas and take advantage of the many opportunities your support helps us to provide. Laura Thompson ’04, our student speaker at graduation, was one of only 52 students nationwide selected to receive a Phi Kappa Phi fellowship for graduate work. Six of our current students were selected by a highly competitive National Science Foundation process to join research teams this past summer at top universities throughout the United States. Other science students stayed here on campus to conduct research with Lycoming professors and were supported by the Merck Internship Grant Program. Numerous Lycoming students also studied overseas with our faculty and staff. We had groups of students analyzing the marine life in Jamaica while others were studying art in France. Students visited global corporations in Poland, France and the United Kingdom under the auspices of our Institute for Management Studies. Our Tour Choir performed in various cities of Spain on a 10-day tour in May, and our women’s soccer team had several matches in England and Wales in August. Opportunities for others were at the College’s archeological dig in Cyprus, a part of our expanding program in archeology. Clearly, all of these students in all of these programs returned to Lycoming with broader views of both the world and themselves.

Lycoming students not only actively enrich campus life, but also participate in community service projects in Williamsport and elsewhere. Last year, Lycoming College students volunteered nearly 35,000 hours of time to a range of initiatives to benefit the less fortunate in our area. As just one example, in early December of 2003, the Lycoming College Chapter of Habitat for Humanity held a dedication service in celebration of their completion of a Habitat house built by our students and with funds raised by our students.

Long-awaited renovations began this summer to the Mary L. Welch Honors Hall, an historic 1880’s building on Fourth Street, just to the south of Skeath Hall. Originally built as a social hall by some of the leading families of Williamsport and later used as a church, the facility is being redesigned to include a recital/lecture hall and the offices of our United Campus Ministry. A meditation chapel in the building will contain the original stain-glass window from the chapel in Old Main and a beautiful altar designed and built by master craftsman, Gene Landon ’57. Alumni will also be pleased to learn that many of the terra cottas removed from Bradley Hall and stored for several decades are being incorporated into the interior design of the building.

This year we said goodbye to several beloved faculty members and to a former chair of the Board of Trustees. We honor and remember Professor Emeritus Paul MacKenzie, who lost a hard fought battle with cancer and passed away in September 2003 at his home. Dr. MacKenzie had been an influential faculty member in the modern language department for 33 years. W. Gibbs McKenney ’37, former chairman of the Board of Trustees, also died during the last year. He guided and led the trustees of Lycoming College throughout the 1970’s and into the early 1980’s, maintaining an active role with the trustees until his death. In August, Professor Emeritus John Graham, a member of our English Department for 39 years, died in Williamsport. He had shared with me that one of his greatest honors occurred in 1996 when the Graham Teaching Professorship was endowed in recognition of his devotion to his students and to personalized instruction.

Institutional quality is judged by students’ access to great teachers. It is also judged by the competitiveness of admissions, the maintenance of superior facilities and programs, and by a college’s overall financial strength and management. Lycoming remains an institution of quality.

The College continues to admit students based on their academic achievements, not on their families’ ability to pay. The vast majority of our students come from families who cannot afford the total cost of a private college education and need financial aid to attend. As a supporter of our 2003-04 Annual Fund, you have played a vital part in helping those students receive their undergraduate educations at an extraordinary college.

Thank you for your generosity this year. With your support, Lycoming will continue to provide brighter futures for our students now – and for those who will open that capsule in 2104.

Sincerely,

James E. Douthat
President
Dear Friends,

Each year the Fall Issue of the Lycoming Magazine acknowledges individuals, corporations, and organizations that chose to support Lycoming’s mission of providing a distinguished baccalaureate education in the liberal arts. The entire College community extends thanks to all who gave in some way to keep the future of Lycoming bright.

Many have asked me what role College Advancement plays in the future of Lycoming College. Some believe we simply ask people for money to support the College. While fund raising is certainly an important component of our work, another goal is to build relationships and keep strong ties with alumni, parents, and friends. You are our best ambassadors.

Keeping you well-informed about the progress of the College is the job of our College Relations team. They reach out to our more public constituents, promoting the image of Lycoming through press releases, web sites and publications – communicating news about the many activities and student successes that occur on our campus. They also reach out to alumni through our quarterly magazine, promoting the many achievements of our alumni and helping to build greater pride for the College.

Our Alumni Office builds a Lycoming community that benefits alumni, parents and current students. The Alumni Office also acts as an “alumni volunteer bureau,” creating a pool of volunteers who help with Homecoming, regional events, and other projects.

Finally, our development team works to encourage our alumni and friends to support Lycoming’s mission. Voluntary financial support is especially important to private colleges like Lycoming. Financial gifts breath new life into existing academic programs, increase financial aid offerings, and ensure that existing traditions continue. Gifts can also transform an idea into a reality.

I close by sharing this story. Upon returning from a College trip to Florida, a Lycoming alumna asked if I had raised lots of money. We talked about why Lycoming relies on the generosity from friends of the College, and she said, “When I saw in the Donor Report what some give, I decided my small gift would never make a difference.” I assured her that her gift – of any size – indeed can make a difference. She responded by giving the College a gift, one her budget would allow. She now has a renewed belief in Lycoming and a renewed belief that she can make a difference as part of this dynamic community.

In the months to come, we will be sharing more about our vision for the future and asking the people who know us best to help us achieve it. Come aboard and join my friends and me with renewed belief in Lycoming College.

Thomas L. Ruhl, P ’06, P’08
Vice President for College Advancement
This past fiscal year, alumni, parents, and friends of the College supported the 2004 Lycoming Annual Fund with gifts totaling $760,967. For the third consecutive year, a committee of alumni and parent volunteers have directed and personally promoted the Lycoming Annual Fund.

The 2004 Lycoming Annual Fund committee, under the leadership of Judy Fry Calistri ’56, consisted of eleven alumni volunteers representing classes from the 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s and 90s; three parent volunteers from the classes of 2004 and 2005; and a local corporation volunteer.

The alumni volunteers made telephone calls to classmates and friends to express the importance of alumni participation in the Lycoming Annual Fund. The committee also recruited additional assistance from the Alumni Association Executive Board in a letter writing campaign that reached 23 different class years.

This letter explained that when national foundations and corporations consider Lycoming College for grant requests, the percentage of alumni giving to the College is one of the top criteria in the application process and a means to measure the strength of the College. The message was a result of the College’s recent application for a grant from a foundation that supports a number of nationally recognized institutions like Lycoming. The foundation reviewed the College’s performance and was impressed by the College’s academic profile, its strong credit, and endowment growth. However, the foundation indicated that while Lycoming has many strong qualities, most colleges awarded grants have an alumni giving participation rate of 40%. The point is very clear, America’s charitable institutions want to see a large number of alumni supporting their alma mater at some level of giving.

The Lycoming Annual Fund Committee has taken this challenge seriously and is working to raise giving participation levels to 40%. Only 5 classes: 1938, 1950, 1957, 1958 and 1960 reached the 40% mark in 2004. For the third consecutive year, the Class of 1938 achieved the highest level of alumni participation in the Lycoming Annual Fund among all class years with 48%.

I invite you to review your class’s participation levels on the chart on pages 7 and 8. The chart illustrates that every gift does make a difference regardless of its size. As prime examples, the classes of 1954 and 1979 participated in special challenges to raise their participation levels in honor of their 50-year and 25-year class reunions. Doris Heller Teufel ’54 and Ken Sibley ’79 led the efforts for their classes and encouraged their classmates to make a gift. Their efforts paid off with the Class of 1954 increasing its participation 5 points to 32% and the Class of 1979 increasing its participation 6 points to 31%. In both instances, the addition of only a few extra people making a gift to the Lycoming Annual Fund helped increase class participation rates significantly.

Because participation rates are so important, an anonymous donor came forward in the spring semester extending a challenge to new alumni donors. The anonymous donor, “double-dared” new donors who made a gift in the last 60 days of the fiscal year by offering to double their gifts to the Lycoming Annual Fund. The anonymous donor has extended the challenge in the fall semester and will again match new donor gifts.

On behalf of the students, faculty, staff and all members of the 2004 Lycoming Annual Fund Committee, thank you for your support of the 2004 Lycoming Annual Fund. Continued annual support combined with the new support from alumni, parents and friends assures that the very best educational opportunities are available to the students of Lycoming College.

Bob Bender ’59
Named Trustee

Robert L. Bender, who spent more than 30 years in higher education administration, has been named a trustee of Lycoming College.

Bob majored in psychology at Lycoming College, where he was also a member of the 1957 Tour Choir (the first Lycoming College choir to tour overseas), a member of the College’s first soccer team under Coach John Lawther, and a member of the Sigma Pi social fraternity. More recently, he served Lycoming College as a member of the Alumni Association Executive Board for seven years.

Bob started his career in education as a teacher in Montoursville. Upon completion of his master’s degree at Bucknell University, he served the Williamsport Area schools as a school psychologist. In 1965 he became an assistant professor of psychology at Bloomsburg State College. Three years later he moved to Illinois where in 1971 he completed his doctorate in higher education at the University of Illinois at Urbana – Champaign and joined the University’s administrative staff. During his tenure there he served in several different capacities. His responsibilities included the University’s continuing education and outreach programs, federal and corporate relations, and intellectual property. He served as the University liaison for academic programs with the Illinois Board of Higher Education. In addition, he was the University of Illinois representative to several national organizations, including the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, and the National University Continuing Education Association (now UCEA).

He retired from the University of Illinois as Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs in 1994 but continued to serve the University as a consultant for several years. He now enjoys golf, reading, and is active in Rotary and church affairs.

Bob is married to Ann Harper Bender ’60. They have three adult children who have advanced degrees. “We tried to teach our children the value of education; we think the idea stuck,” says Bob. They also have eight grandchildren.

Stan Sloter ’80
Named Trustee

Stanley W. Sloter ’80, president and founder of the Paradigm Companies, has been named a trustee of the College. Paradigm is a full-service real estate development, construction and property management firm with operations throughout the mid-Atlantic region. Paradigm has developed over 7,000 urban and high rise residential apartments and condominiums.

Paradigm Construction Company acts as a general contractor in the construction of apartment and condominium projects for both Paradigm Development Company and third party owners. Paradigm Construction is active throughout the Mid-Atlantic region specializing in high density, historic and other complex residential projects. The Paradigm Management Company oversees the operation of over 7,500 luxury garden and high density apartments including 1,500 affordable units.

While Stan is extremely busy with various community affiliations, such as KidsPeace National Center for Kids in Crisis where he is the Chairman of the local board of association. In addition he is a board member for the Washington Center and the Harbor School, a member of the Arlington Housing Commission and District of Columbia Comprehensive Housing Strategy Task Force. Also, Stan is a member of the Arlington County Housing Commission and a director of the Arlington-based Classika Theatre. Significant past experience includes serving as president and director of the Arlington Housing Corporation (now known as AHC, Inc.), Arlington County’s largest not-for-profit housing provider.

Stan graduated from Lycoming College with a Bachelor of Arts in Business-Management and received his master’s in business administration from the University of Pittsburgh. Prior to initiating a career in development, Stanley’s background was in construction lending with Pittsburgh National Bank.

Stan and his wife Jolene (Hall) ’80 have two children: Kelsey, age 10, and Andrea, age 6.
David Argall ’80 Opens Academic Year

David Argall ’80, a representative to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, was the featured speaker at New Student Convocation on August 27 in which 407 members of the Class of 2008 were welcomed on campus. This is one of the largest freshman classes in the last decade.

Foreign Flavor

Lycoming’s May Term and its travel abroad component continues to attract students. Last May, art students could choose a trip to Paris and the south of France as part of a photography, painting or art history course. Business students had the opportunity to travel to London and Krakow, while tropical marine biologists studied tropical marine life in Jamaica. French students studied in Grenoble and perfected their skills in Paris and Provence.

It’s a Family Affair

Lycoming College prides itself on its family-like atmosphere and for 46 members of the Class of 2008, there is just cause for that family feeling. Twenty-two students are considered “legacies,” which means they have an alumnus parent or grandparent. Eighteen have siblings who are currently attending Lycoming or are alumni – high praise, indeed for Lycoming.

Legacies not pictured include:
More than 60 alumni and friends enjoyed the second annual “Team Timeout” outing at Camden Yards featuring a pre-game barbecue at Camden Yards and a game between the Baltimore Orioles and the Toronto Blue Jays on August 21, 2004. The event was sold out and even brought Lycoming College President, James E. Douthat, to the ball game. Special thanks to Stephen Simchak ’99 for organizing the event. Sign up early for next year!

Congratulations to Doris (Losch) and Laurence P. Maynard, Jr., on the observance of their 60th wedding anniversary on July 15, 2004.

Office Solutions magazine, founded by Charlie Mitchell, celebrated 20 years. Mitchell began the magazine in 1984 as Office Systems and was publisher for the first 14 years. Mitchell was profiled in the July/August issue. The magazine is an outgrowth of Charlie’s career selling ad space with the office equipment and products marketplaces. The magazine is targeted to the small business owner. The magazine is now on its 4th owner, and Mitchell is still advertising consultant.

Paul Kaseman ’48 Coming Full Circle

Back in the 1960’s, when Paul Kaseman was a senior engineer with RCA Corporation, he was asked to give a presentation at National Institute for Health. He demonstrated to several hundred medical professionals a camera device that would allow doctors to perform surgical procedures through tiny incisions in the body. It was the last program of the day.

Paul had almost forgotten about the demonstration until August of 2003 when he underwent removal of his gall bladder performed through laparoscopic surgery. The now routine surgery used technology he had helped to develop.

Paul’s career not only had him working on cameras that probed the inner workings of the human body, but also cameras that probed the far reaches of outer space. Kaseman became the lead designer of the camera tube that sent live pictures back to earth from the moon during the Apollo 15, 16 and 17 missions in 1971-72.

RCA had first come out with the camera tube in 1970, a year after the first moon landing. The camera was tough enough to withstand the vibrations of lift-off, but tender enough to pick up and send back crystal clear images.

Paul knew he wanted to be an engineer from his early days growing up in Sullivan County, Pa. His education was postponed by World War II. During the war, he taught radar (then a brand new technology), at a secret base in the swamps of Florida as part of the U.S. Army Signal Corps.

After the war, he used his G.I. Bill to take his first two years of college at the then Dickinson Junior College before transferring to Penn State where he completed his degree in engineering.

A day student, he lived near Jack Hollenback ’47, who later taught business administration at the College. He recalls some outstanding teachers in math that the college had at the time and remembers Prof. John Graham.

Retired from RCA since 1982, he and his wife, the former Janet Warfel of Millersville, have two adult children and a grandchild.

Congratulations to Catherine and Robert P. Lundy on the observance of their 50th wedding anniversary on July 10, 2004.

Dr. Barbara Neff Price (psychology) has been appointed to serve on the Alumni Association Executive Board beginning September 2004. Barbara is retired from Luzerne County Community College and is residing in Shavertown, Pa., with her husband, William.

Dr. Eli Stavisky (biology) was awarded The Pennsylvania Dental Association Annual Award at its yearly meeting in April 2004. It is the highest and most prestigious award given by the Pennsylvania Dental Association and is given to an individual who has given a lifetime of service to the dental profession as well as advanced the art and science of dentistry.

Dr. Stavisky is past president of the Scranton and Third District Dental Societies and past president of the American College of Dentistry Philadelphia--Delaware Valley section. He served on the Pennsylvania State Board for 13 years and was chairman for 10 consecutive years. During his years as chairman, the entire set of dental regulations was re-written and the Dental Practice Act was reviewed and revised. Dr. Stavisky was recently honored by Temple University School of Dentistry with its Founders Day Award and inducted into the Gallery of Success at Temple University. He serves as chairman of the Advisory Committee for the School of Dentistry and was appointed by the President of Temple University to serve on the Board of Visitors. He also teaches ethics at the School of Dentistry.

Dr. Stavisky is currently the dental consultant for the Pennsylvania Attorney General’s Office and the State Dental Board. He serves on the Board of Trustees at St. Tikhon’s Theological Seminary. His three daughters are dentists: Tanya, an orthodontist, and Elena and Natasha as pediatric dentists.

Dr. Gloria Bodtorf Clark (Spanish) Assistant Professor of Spanish at Penn State—Harrisburg, has won the Teacher of the Year 2004 award for the Capital Campus of Penn State University, which includes the campuses in Schuylkill and Harrisburg. Gloria and her husband, Rev. Richard Clark ’68, are residing in Palmyra, Pa.

Robert “Robbie” Cross (sociology) climbed Mount Katahdin in Maine this past winter. Katahdin is the highest mountain in Maine and the only area in the continental United States to offer arctic conditions in winter. Robbie and a group of local hikers, all in their late 40’s or 50’s, revisited Mount Katahdin, having hiked it before in the winter of 1984. The journey lasted for an entire week and the winds at the summit raged from 40 to 50 miles per hour, reducing the hikers to traveling on their hands and knees. The group has plans for a return trip in 5 or 10 years.

Dr. Glenn Stevens (economics) has been promoted to associate professor of finance at Franklin & Marshall College. He joined the college faculty in 1995. Glenn received his master’s degree from Loyola College in 1977 and a master’s in finance in 1979. In 1995, he earned his Ph.D. in public administration from The Pennsylvania State University.

P. Jay Tray (biology) has retired as principal of Sunrise Estates Elementary School. He has been a presence in the Penn-Trafford School District since 1985. Jay plans to spend a lot of time volunteering in the community and is looking forward to visiting Ireland later this year. Jay and his wife, Barbara, are the parents of a daughter, Kylie.

Bill Gallagher (English) retired June 30, 2004, after 34 years in education. He spent 23 years as an English teacher and department chair at the Shikellamy School District and the last 11 years in administration with the Northern York County School District. Bill lives outside of Carlisle, Pa., with his wife and daughter and has no plans for the immediate future other than relaxing and teaching Phil Barlett ’70 to sail.

Dr. Susan “Sue” Stewart (psychology) recently attended the wedding of Lana (Falejev) Lindstrom ’70 and Richard Hughes in Oregon. Lana retired as the City of Eugene Treasury Officer several years ago. She loves playing in Oregon and welcomes all visitors. Sue has been living in Florida for 30 years but relocated to Asheville, N.C., in August to join the special education faculty at Western Carolina University. Sue is looking forward to exploring North Carolina and welcomes visitors too!

James Symmons (theatre) recently did research in Madrid and Granada, Spain, in preparation for a course on Federico Garcia Lorca and Contemporary Spanish Drama. The course will be included in the International Relations minor at Penn State (Delco). Jim will travel to Spain with a group of students during spring break 2005. His next project will be “Politics and the Moscow Art Theater During the Soviet Era.”
John Marthinsen ’70
Is Big on Risky Business

John Marthinsen ’70, has published his third book, the latest on risky business ventures, entitled Risk Takers: Uses and Abuses of Financial Derivatives. While the title of the book may seem complicated, John assures us that the main purpose of the book is to simplify the comprehension of financial derivatives.

“Most risk management books are highly theoretical and use a lot of abstract math, and de-emphasize practical applications,” explained Marthinsen. The book is currently being used as a text at the Harvard Business School.

Marthinsen aims to bridge the gap between theory and practical application in his book, by using real life examples that readers can relate to. To explain and simplify the definition of a derivative, he uses oil as an example. Explaining that derivative is another term for option, he shows readers that doing typical things like securing a rate for your heating oil for the winter is an option derivative.

In addition to explaining financial derivatives in simple terms, Risk Takers also uses case studies of abuses on the corporate side involving high profile companies like Proctor & Gamble (which Marthinsen estimates lost about $157 million), and other unwise derivative deals including Orange County, California, which lost about $1.5 billion; Barings Bank, $1.2 billion; and Long Term Capital Management, $3.5 billion. “Risk management is about people, decisions and the wise or reckless use of financial tools. Financial derivatives are just a set of these tools.”

“I hope the stories in this book contribute to a more thorough understanding of risk principles by explaining derivatives within the context of actual events and by spanning the gap between theory and practice,” said Marthinsen. “Financial derivatives have great potential in the current economic environment, but they are highly misunderstood.”

Marthinsen’s other publications include Wealth by Association: Global Prosperity through Market Unification, Switzerland: A Guide to the Money and Capital Markets. He is currently an economics professor at Babson University.

Marthinsen is married to Laraine Danielsen ’77. They have two sons and live in Sherborn, Mass.

Created One of the Top Places to Work

Founding a successful company is no small feat, but creating a company that has been cited as one of the top ten best places to work in Pennsylvania exceeds every goal.

Roxanne Copp Edwards was working for a printer in Lancaster, Pa., in 1990 when she and three other employees discovered a niche market they thought had business potential.

They began Reprint Management Services, which produces reprints of magazine articles. For example, when PC World named an inkjet printer as the best in its category, RMS was able to sell the inkjet manufacturer on reprints to use in marketing. RMS took care of contacting the magazine, getting the necessary permissions, reformattning the article to exclude the ads and secondary articles that might appear on each page, and printing out the individual article with appropriate masthead.

Recently they have added electronic reprints called “Next Books” in which the pages turn on a website as you read them.

While they built RMS on “fantastic customer service,” Edwards, who is vice president of production, and her partners also created the kind of company where they had always wanted to work.

Dress is casual. Every success is a cause for celebration. Every sale is announced companywide over the intercom. New employees are treated to a pizza party. Long-time employees are rewarded with a month-long paid sabbatical, with 20 hours of community service as the only requirement.

High goals are set. But the company’s success is shared. That can mean end-of-the-year bonuses. Or, as it did in 1998, it can mean an all expense paid 4-day trip to Disney World for all 50 employees and their families.

Edwards studied drawing and painting with Roger Shipley and Octavia Hughes at Lycoming and graphic arts at Rochester Institute of Technology. While she may not have considered running a business earlier in her career, she enjoys the challenge.

“I have in my own business had the opportunity to be very creative in a lot of different ways,” says Edwards.

Edwards would say that compassion is the most important thing in running a business – compassion for the folks that work with you, your clients and your family. But courage would be a close second choice.

Kim (Gammell) Loidus ’82 met her in Williamsport.

It’s a Small World
Kathleen Cody Brady hadn’t been back to Williamsport since her graduation in 1982. This summer, she came back as the proud mother of James Brady, a member of the Little League World Series team from Thousand Oaks, California. Each team in the Little League World Series has an “uncle,” a local volunteer from the Williamsport area who acts as a guide. By the luck of the draw, Ron Frick ’83, who has served as an uncle for several years, drew the California team.

“When I saw him,” says Kathleen, “I made a call to one of my friends and asked her if he had been to Lycoming with us.”

“When they told me there was a woman from California who had gone to a local college, I recognized her right away,” says Ron, who, like Kathleen, has two sons.

Kathleen used the week in Williamsport to catch up. She stopped by the college for a quick tour, peeked into Rich Hall (“I think they still have the same furniture.”) and stopped at Joey’s for a cheese steak. (“It’s so much bigger.”) Kim (Gammell) Loidus ’82 met her in Williamsport.

The California team went on to win the U.S. Championship. There’s also a chance Kathleen could be back. Son Michael is 7½.

Prof. John P. Graham, 89

John P. Graham “shuffled off this mortal coil” on August 8, 2004 in Williamsport, Pa. Johnny Graham began teaching at the then Dickinson Junior College in 1939, leaving in 1941 to serve in an amphibious unit in the Pacific during WWII. He returned to Lycoming and continued teaching until his retirement in 1978.

His commitment to students was legendary. He routinely provided extra help and tutoring to those who had a strong desire to learn. In 1996, one of his students, Daniel G. Fultz ’57, endowed a faculty chair to recognize Graham. The John P. Graham Chair is awarded to a faculty member who provides “extraordinary service to students.” That chair has been held by Dr. David J. Rife, professor of English, and by Dr. Richard J. Morris, professor of history.

Graham was a graduate of Dickinson College and received his master’s degree at The Pennsylvania State University.

He is survived by a son, Thomas, of Mahomet, Ill., and a daughter, Patricia Cohick, of Sallasburg, four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His wife, Helen, died in 1988.
