Groundbreaking for Lycoming’s new $8.2 million Rec Center took place on November 15, 2002, as Robert L. Shangraw, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, took the levers of the bulldozer in hand.

On hand for the groundbreaking were members of the Board of Trustees (who were on campus for their semi-annual meeting), faculty, staff and students.

The new center is rising next to Lamade Gymnasium. J. B. Gibbons of Williamsport is the general contractor. The 54,000 sq. ft. facility was designed by John Haas Associates of Penn State which includes the Bryce Jordan Center among its credentials.

The new Rec Center will include four multi-purpose courts, 1/8-mile suspended running track, and a new exercise/weight room.

There’s no place like Lycoming for a Homecoming!

With the theme of the Wizard of Oz and some raindrops falling, Lycoming certainly became “someplace over the rainbow,” for the hundreds of alumni who gathered to celebrate a special reunion or simply the weekend.

The weekend started off with the annual golf tournament, the biology/chemistry lecture, and the Athletic Hall of Fame Dinner on Friday. On Saturday morning, dedicated alumni participated in a wet work session on the Lycoming Habitat for Humanity House. Friends found each other at the football game, then caught up at the all-campus barbecue and celebrated well into the night at one of Williamsport’s several familiar watering holes.

Reunion Class Gifts

Under the leadership of W. Clark Gaughan, the Class of 1977 celebrated its 25th reunion with a reunion gift of $8,172 to the College. The challenge is out to the Class of 1978 to beat that number.

The Class of 1952 came with $1,000 and a special challenge. It was the Class of 1952 that conceived of the Chieftain Award. Its first recipient was Nancy Hall ’52. As of last May the large bronze plaque was filled. The Class donated enough money for two side panels that will accommodate 50 more Chieftain names. At the Heritage breakfast, the Class of 1952 challenged the Class of 2003 to collect money for a new plaque in 2053!

Gamma Delta Sigma’s 25th Anniversary!

Gamma Delt celebrated 25 years as an independent Lycoming College sorority and gave advisor Deb Weaver a special send off for her retirement.

Defending last year’s title and winning with a brilliant score of 10 under par (62) was the team of Mike Chianelli ’68, Robert Chianelli ’60, Alan Cohick ’67 and Dave Bower. Second place went to the team of Terry Conrad (Lyco basketball coach), Jerry Fisher, Lou Mazzante, and Seth Burch ’89.

Dr. Otto L. Sonder, Jr., ’46

In 1946, Dr. Otto L. Sonder, Jr., received his certificate from Williamsport-Dickinson Junior College, now Lycoming College. He went on to obtain his Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology from the American University in 1948, and his Doctor of Education from the Pennsylvania State University in 1964.

Dr. Sonder began his career as an instructor in political science and sociology at the Pennsylvania State University. From 1956-1968 he served as the Associate Professor and Chairman of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Lycoming College. His dedication to his profession led him to the position of Adjunct Professor of Sociology at New York State University College and the Senior Professor of Sociology and Anthropology at Hartwick College, Oneonta, N.Y.

Dr. Sonder is respected for his breadth of knowledge within higher education. He has served on numerous boards, including the Greater Oneonta Historical Society and the Jackson Leadership Academy. From 1996 through the present, he has been a member of Lycoming College’s Alumni Association Executive Board.

Dr. Sonder has received several special honors. In 1974, the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity lounge at Lycoming College was dedicated to him. He was also the recipient of the Evan C. Varner Award for Distinguished Service from Alpha Sigma Phi in 1996. In August 2002, he served as the convocation speaker for the Class of 2006 at Lycoming College.

The Outstanding Achievement Award:

Mr. Eugene E. Landon ’57

Mr. Eugene E. Landon ’57 of Montoursville received this year’s Outstanding Achievement Award, given in recognition of special accomplishments.

Landon graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry and biology from Lycoming College. Upon graduation, he received an award for distinction of outstanding achievement in science.

He furthered his education at Cornell University, majoring in taxonomy and bacteriology.

After working for 20 years in the chemical coatings industry, serving as founder and President of Landon Chemical, Inc., Landon retired early to devote his time to his real love: restoring and reproducing eighteenth-century furniture. His restoration and authentic reproductions can be found in private homes and in such prestigious places as the Heritage Center and the White House.

Landon is nationally recognized as a leading artisan and authority on eighteenth-century furniture. He is the consultant to many major collectors and dealers, as well as some of the leading museums in the Landon was recently commissioned to build furniture from the last living Liberty Tree that was felled on the campus of Saint John’s College in Maryland. Among the completed projects were a Bible Box for President George W. Bush and a yoke for the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia.

The Dale V. Bower Service Award:
Mr. Thomas M. Aubrey, Jr. ’58

Thomas M. Aubrey, Jr., of Mohnton received the Dale V. Bower Service Award—given to an alumnus or a non-alumnus for outstanding service rendered to Lycoming College.

In 1958 Mr. Aubrey graduated with a bachelor’s degree in political science. He began his 31 years as a public school teacher at Fleetwood Junior Senior High School in 1958. He later taught at Hanover Park Regional High School for a year. From 1963 to 1989 he taught social studies, English, and career education at Wyomissing Area High School. He also coached varsity basketball and varsity golf. He has been an entrepreneur and owned and operated several businesses.

In addition to Mr. Aubrey’s professional activities, he ran the National Junior golf tournaments in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and North Carolina for eighteen years. He also worked part-time in timing and scoring on the Championship Eastern Swing. He worked the tracks at Pocono, Trenton, and Williams Grove.

As a hobby, Mr. Aubrey spends most of his spare time in the fall photographing Lycoming College’s football and basketball teams. He also wrote Ten Bucks and a Yes Vote: A Memoir of Lycoming College Football.

The Dale V. Bower Service Award is named for Dale V. Bower ’59 of Montoursville, who is both a graduate and a long-time member of Lycoming’s administration.
On the Friday before Homecoming this fall, Ann Sue Bingaman McCormick ’60 swept out of the McKenney Board Room in Long Hall wearing a colorful T-shirt with the words “There’s No Place like Home-coming.”

She had just finished two days of meetings with the Alumni Association Executive Board, and she was ready to take on three days of non-stop activities as part of Homecoming 2002. Her office was filled with homecoming boxes. A stuffed scarecrow from the Wizard of Oz lay on her windowsill and on her conference table was a pair of newly sequined red shoes for student Mindy Cox to wear at Registration in keeping with the year’s Wizard of Oz theme.

The sign on her door said it all “Let the Stress Begin!”

Sue’s office is filled with pictures that tell much about what is important in her life. There are pictures of husband Jay McCormick ’60 and sons, Michael and Patrick. On her bulletin board are pictures of the tour choir singing at the Crystal Cathedral, Sue posing with the senior class officers from the last five years, a picture of an alumna and her baby, and photos of she, Jay, and Bob Shangraw, chairman of the Board of Trustees, in Florida.

When she became director of alumni and parent programs in 1997, “she got her dream job,” she says. It was also a nostalgic homecoming. She had entered Lycoming in 1957 wearing a freshman “dink” and a sign around her neck with her name on it. She sang under Walter McIver and studied social sciences under Dr. Otto Sonder, her favorite professor. She was also Kappa Delta Rho’s Homecoming Queen in her junior year when Jay McCormick, a KDR brother, received the fateful assignment of being her escort. Jay and Sue recently celebrated their 40th anniversary.

Sue’s career demonstrates the flexibility of a broad-based liberal arts education. She taught elementary school for seven years (six in Hershey), until she and Jay moved to Williamsport. While Jay managed the family business, McCormick Dray Lines, Sue relinquished

Help Wanted

This summer, Sue McCormick ’60 hangs up the magic red shoes as the Director of Alumni and Parent Programs. These will be very big shoes to fill. However, the College is looking for a special alumnus to fill this position.

- Must be a graduate of Lycoming College
- Able to do considerable overnight travel
- Must work periodic weekends during the year
- Must have excellent verbal and written communication skills

The Director of Alumni and Parent Programs acts as liaison with the Alumni Association Executive Board and with regional organizations, helps to organize and plan Homecoming and Parents Weekends.

For more information or to submit a resume, contact Thomas L. Ruhl, Vice President of Development and College Relations, Lycoming College, 700 College Place, Williamsport, PA 17701. Email: ruhl@lycoming.edu. Resumes will be accepted until March 15, 2003.
her teaching position to become a stay-at-home mother, preserving her sanity during those years by becoming very active in community theatre. Over the years, she has played Ethel in On Golden Pond, both Martha and Abby in Arsenic and Old Lace, Helga in Nightwatch, Mamita in Gigi, Frumasarah in Fiddler on the Roof and countless characters in close to 50 productions.

Sue has also taught reading at the West Branch School, co-owned a gift shop, and was a successful realtor for 12 years — all great preparation to head up the alumni operations of the College. “I’ve enjoyed being back on campus, and I have delighted in the growth of the college. I’ve enjoyed reconnecting with old friends and finding alumni I didn’t know about,” she says. “I also love interacting with the students,” she continues. She has been a loyal fan of the Tour Choir, accompanying them on spring break tours, and has acted as Senior Class advisor.

“I’ll miss the kids,” she says, when thinking about retirement.

Sue plans to hang out with her very active 93-year-old mother, do some traveling with Jay, and catch up on some books.

She also promises to be actively involved in planning the 50th Reunion of the Class of 1960 in 2010!

Picture this. You are sitting in front of the phone with your sweaty palm resting on the receiver. Everyone around you is already on the phone. Finally, you work up the nerve to lift the receiver and dial the first number on the list. After several rings, a voice on the other end says “hello”. Your heart races as you look at the script in front of you and introduce yourself to the Lycoming College alumnus. The voice is friendly. He remembers

Lycoming, and you start to relax. He wants to know how the teams are doing.

Congratulations! You have just survived your first official call for the annual Lycoming College phonathon.

This event is an important fundraiser for the College, which has a Lycoming Annual Fund goal this year of $745,000. This is money that Jennifer Wilson, Director of Annual Giving, describes as the College’s “margin of excellence.”

“These are unrestricted funds that can be used for scholarships, for laboratory equipment, or for academic programs —wherever the need is greatest,” she explains.

The phonathon is one of several ways the College asks its alumni to support the College.

“It’s interesting,” Wilson continues, “that most of our student callers know the importance of the Annual Fund first hand, because most are receiving some kind of financial aid.”

In preparation for the phonathon, all student callers are required to attend an hour and a half training session in Long Hall. During the training, students are briefed on many different situations, including

- Calling and speaking with alumni and parents
- How to be personable when calling
- How to deal with aggressive callers
- What to do if no one answers
- What kind of information would be of interest to alumni
- How to take credit cards

Students are also given a general script to help them with their first few calls.

“Training went very well,” said Andrew Derr, a freshmen caller. “They taught us pretty much anything we would need to know. Then we were given scripts, and we were able to practice calling with each other.” Although the training went well, the first few calls were still challenging for some.

“The first night was definitely the hardest,” said Derr. “I was really nervous, but the script helped, and most of the people I called were real nice. By the end of the whole phonathon, calling was very easy.”

Student callers are motivated by many things. Phonathon calling is a campus job, and many students find this a good way to meet college bills. The Lycoming Annual Fund also offers an opportunity for students to raise money for a campus organization. When students collectively reach a minimum goal of 125 hours of calling, the organization they represent is given a $250 bonus. Jason McCalhan, Assistant Director of Annual Giving, said that this is an effective recruitment tool because the organizations encourage students to call and raise money. This year, for example, the Creative Arts Society (CAS) was able to meet and exceed its goal, working a total of 130 hours.

According to student callers, alumni react in very different ways to the phonathon. “People came up with some very creative reasons why they couldn’t come to the phone or give money,” said Heather Kauffman, a sophomore. “But the call that stands out the most for me is one man who, at first, wasn’t interested in giving. After I spoke with him for a while about what was happening on campus, he suddenly said ‘you’ve convinced me.’ He then asked to speak to my manager about what a good job I did. He said he wanted me to be the one to call him from now on.”

Of course, not all calls turned out like that. Ryan Rhed, a freshmen and the top caller for the fall 2002 session, said that there were quite a few people who simply hung up. But he said that money wasn’t always the important thing. “Some people were real happy to receive calls and hear about the school even if they couldn’t give any money.” Rhed said that his most memorable call was with a woman who wasn’t able to give a gift to the college, but she was in the medical profession and spoke to him about campus events as well as developments in the medical field.

For some, it was the people who never answered the phone at all that stand out most in their memories. “Some of the answering machine messages were really strange and funny,” Derr said. “One person had their cats meowing on the machine as the message. It was pretty interesting!” Students also used different strategies to make the phonathon more interesting and challenging. “I made it into a competition inspired for myself,” said Rhed. “I set a goal of five hundred dollars a night. Sometimes I would fall short, but I was generally able to reach my goal. On my best night, I raised one thousand dollars. Making it into a competition inspired me to do my best work.”

The phonathon has also changed some of the student’s view about telemarketers. “Before I did this, I didn’t really respect telemarketers very much at all. Now I can definitely sympathize with them. But at the same time, I think that the phonathon is different because the alumni have a special connection to Lycoming that they don’t have with a credit card company or a magazine. I think the college alumni should be proud of the phonathon as an easy way to give. “I can put a gift on a credit card in a couple of minutes and not even have to write a check,” she said. The numbers demonstrate the success of the phonathon. In the fall semester, the students raised $61,094 in pledges, and are well on their way to reaching the overall phonathon goal of $100,000 for the 2002-2003 school year.

Lycoming Tradition,” said Rhed. Derr agreed, saying, “My views have changed in a sense. Now I know what it is like to be on the opposite end of the phone.”

Most of the students said that, as a whole, the phonathon was a positive experience and that they are planning on doing it again either for the spring semester or for the next school year. At least one friend of the College looks forward to the
With recent fluctuations in the job market, millions of Americans are finding themselves searching for a new job or career. Add to this the current shift from a manufacturing economy to an economy focused on service, and many Lycoming alumni find themselves re-entering the job market.

The Lycoming College Career Development Center (CDC) may be able to help. The CDC is open to alumni as well as current students. Its services include updating resumes, building skill bases, and helping with job relocations and professional networking.

“Lycoming College has more than 14,000 living alumni, 9,000 of whom are still in the job market,” said Jerry Falco, Director of the CDC. “Our services are open to everyone; we will not turn anyone away.”

“One of the hardest things about the loss of a job,” said Falco, “is that often, a person’s job is a large part of their identity.”

The process of a job transition can be compared to the stages of the grieving process. Most people go through five emotional stages when they lose their jobs, including disbelief, sense of betrayal, confusion, anger, and finally, resolution. However, Falco stressed that in many cases, people who go through a job transition are ultimately happier with their new jobs than they were in their old jobs. The CDC is prepared to help anyone through this transition by offering any of their services, or even just by giving alumni someone to talk to.

One of the most important things anyone can do for his career is to keep his eyes open for new job opportunities.

“Our students today can expect to go through two to four job changes in their first 5 years of employment and 5 to 10 changes over their career,” explained Falco. “But many of our older alumni have had the same job for 30 years, and it is hard for them to consider other options.”

A large percentage of older alumni were also trained in a manufacturing society, said Falco. Now that the economy is changing its focus to a business economy, many of these alumni are finding it difficult to adjust. The most important and simplest way to adjust is to look at transferable skills used in a previous job rather than the job title itself. These skills can then be matched to the new work environment. For example, someone who worked as a floor manager at a factory may have a very difficult time finding another job with this same title. If that person, however, looks at the skills they used in this job, such as conflict management and communication skills, and highlight these skills in his resume, he may be able to find a new job with greater ease.

There are some other strategies recommended by the CDC that can help with job security and can make a career change much easier.

These include:
- Keep resumes updated and ready to use.
- Continue to build a skill base.
- Use a strategy of continuous job searching.
- Maintain a personal and professional network.
- Keep an eye on the changes occurring in your profession and related areas.
- As a safety net, maintain at least three months’ salary in a checking or savings account.

Another important consideration when looking for a new job is needs vs. wants, Falco explained. Many people, when searching for a new job, are not willing to consider options that involve a cut in salary. However, one of the most important factors to take into account is how much you need compared to how much you want, and then search for opportunities available for you in that range. This can broaden the range of search, and can lead to a more satisfying and enjoyable career.

“When conducting job searches, it is important to use many different sources. Newspapers only advertise about 30% of the jobs that are available. Important personal and professional networking can identify great jobs in the hidden market,” Falco said.

One of those networking sources is alumni connections.

“We have an excellent networking system of which everyone should take advantage. It is important to work both hard and smart in a job search,” Falco explained.
retriever for the Lycoming College football team. The border collie is owned and trained by Dr. Darby Lewes, associate professor of English. “As far as I know,” says Lewes “she is the only grandma to be a member of a collegiate football team.”

Apart from her on-field performance, Folly helps Dr. Lewes make professional presentations at teaching conferences. She was featured in “A Portrait of the Student as a Young Dog: Using Behavior Modification in the Classroom to Increase Motivation” at the Lilly Teaching Conference in 2000.

Folly is a certified therapy dog, a fundraiser for the ASPCA, and on the Board of the National Border Collie Rescue.

Then & Now

Judge
Judge was the mascot for the Dickinson Junior College football team in the 1930s. Judge became the pet of the Toohey family, explains Frances Toohey McNulty who supplied the photo. Harriet Toohey, Frances’s mother, made the wonderful coat! “I was too young to remember much about Judge except that he was gentle with us but a terror otherwise,” says Frances.

Frances remembers that Earl Z. McKay was the coach of the team at the time. He was married to Gladys Long who was the daughter of President John W. Long.

The Toohey family had four graduates: Harriet Toohey Heilig ’43, Bill Toohey ’47, Jack Toohey ’50 and Frances Toohey McNulty ’51.

The institution delivers a respected small education. This hasn’t happened by Lycoming's distinguished liberal arts mission to provide “a nearly all of the other national liberal arts colleges, up from 159th place last year. Amherst College in Massachusetts led the way in this class. However, Lycoming stood out in one category. It ranked 8th in Graduation Rate Performance. This statistic takes the expected graduation rate and compares it to the actual graduation rate. As a result 16% more students graduated from Lycoming than would have been expected to do so. Simply put, the College is taking good students and making them better.

In a real sense, Lycoming is, in fact, adding more value to a student’s education than nearly all of the other national liberal arts colleges, and certainly fulfilling its mission to provide “a distinguished liberal arts education.”

This hasn’t happened by chance. Lycoming’s education model is one long espoused by some of the most respected small colleges in the United States. The institution delivers a broad-based curriculum in small classes taught by senior, highly credentialed faculty who have been chosen for their teaching ability. Eighty-nine percent of its faculty is full-time, a figure that puts Lycoming ahead of Wellesley, Gettysburg and Muhlenburg, for example.

Lycoming is delivering a superior education despite financial resources that are a fraction of many of the colleges in its class. Think of what Lycoming could do with your Annual Fund gift!

Admissions Scores Big with Open Houses this year

This fall, an average of over 200 students registered for each Open House, setting a new record. The special open house for potential science majors, called “Science Saturday” attracted 99 students, a five-year high. Lycoming achieved website fame when it made Gregg Easterbrook’s column “Tuesday Morning Quarterback” on the ESPN “Page 2” website on September 10, 2002.

Easterbrook noted Lycoming’s 54 to 0 win over Delaware Valley. The columnist ribbed the college but also noted as having “a solid liberal arts reputation and a classy college-looking leafy campus!” Thanks Gregg.

Sacred Paintings of Southeast Asia
This fall, the College had a rare opportunity to exhibit part of the James Bogle collection of Thai religious art. James is the brother of Jon Bogle, professor emeritus of art. The exhibition included 40 paintings depicting the life of prince Siddhattha and his enlightenment as the Buddha. The paintings dated from the 18th century up to 1950, although most were from 1850 to 1880.

While Jon Bogle is a sculptor, his brother, James, is an avid lifelong collector of art. His career as an urban and rural planner took him to Africa, Europe, South America and Southeast Asia where he fell in love with the religious art of the region.

Former Faculty Member Receives Award

Charles Getchell, who taught math at Lycoming (1967 - 1988) received a Lifetime Achievement Award from Spectra, where he is Senior Vice President of Research and Development. Getchell was cited as having “truly innovated the consumer research field.”

Spectra/Market Metrics has had a close relationship with Lycoming College for many years. Its staff includes Douglas Argall ’90, Curt Keen ’88, Jason Keen ’99, and Michael Wirth ’86.

Spectra, according to Doug Argall, “tells Nabisco where they can sell more Oreo and Kraft where they can sell more macaroni and cheese.”

Volleyball • 17-11

The Warrior volleyball team highlighted Lycoming’s fall athletic season, qualifying for the conference playoffs for the seventh time in eight seasons. In their second season under the direction of head coach Tim McMahon, the Warriors compiled a record of 17-11, including a semifinal victory over FDU—Florham in the Freedom Conference tournament.

Lycoming was led by junior Layne Haverstock. Haverstock led the squad in both kills and blocks with 385 and 155, respectively. She also led the conference in both categories and earned first-team all-conference honors.

Sophomore Kelli Watson had a breakout year for the Warriors, ranking second on the team with 363 kills and leading the team in hitting percentage with a mark of .304. Fellow sophomore Seneca Reilly led the team in both assists and aces for the second consecutive year. Reilly averaged 10.65 assists per game and recorded 55 service aces during the season. Jana Reitz joined the team as a freshman transfer and led the squad in digs with 268. She also tallied 114 kills and 51 blocks.

Football • 6-3

Lycoming’s football team recorded its 28th consecutive winning campaign in 2002, going 6-3 with two of their losses coming in overtime. The Warriors got off to a fast start with four consecutive wins to open the year, including a 50-3 pounding of rival Susquehanna and a 24-10 victory over eventual MAC champion King’s. Lycoming’s post-season aspirations, however, were dashed with two straight overtime losses in weeks five and six. But showing the character of a Frank Girardi coached team, the Warriors rebounded to win two of their final three games, including a 55-24 triumph over Juniata to sendoff the team’s 20 seniors.

Tailback Jared Morris had a stellar senior season after biding his time for three years as a backup. Morris carried the ball 159 times in 2002 for 1,005 yards and 11 touchdowns. Six times he rushed for more than 100 yards in a single game. Morris’s partner in crime in Lycoming’s backfield was senior fullback Jon Neve. Neve carried the ball 105 times for 534 yards and seven touchdowns. He recorded three consecutive 100-yard games to open the season before suffering an ankle injury that slowed him the remainder of the year. The Warriors’ running back tandem caught the attention of coaches around the MAC earning first-team all-conference honors.

Sophomore quarterback Phil Mann put up strong numbers in his first season as a starter. Mann completed 80-134 passes for 1,100 yards. He tossed nine touchdowns while being intercepted only five times. Mann’s passing efficiency rating of 143.36 led the MAC and ranked 22nd in the nation at the end of the regular season. He was 6-1 as a starter, missing Lycoming’s two overtime losses due to an injury.

Junior Ricky Lannetti was the Warriors’ leading receiver with 30 catches on the season for 468 yards and three touchdowns. Fellow juniors Sean Hennigar and Ray Withelder also played key roles in the passing game with 20 catches each and a combined 681 receiving yards.

Defensively, senior Chris Roantree set the tone for Lycoming, ranking second in tackles with 48 while leading the team with five sacks and 16 tackles-for-a-loss. Roantree was named an all-conference first-team member. Fellow senior Zach Latsha helped Roantree control the defensive front, recording 47 tackles on the year including four sacks and 11 tackles behind the line of scrimmage.

Freshman Luke Sterling led the linebacking corps with a team-high 54 tackles. Seniors Steff Chortanoff and Brian Bond added 41 and 38 stops, respectively, along side Sterling. Chortanoff earned all-conference honorable mention honors. In the secondary, senior Matt Henrich was a first-team all-conference selection after leading the Warriors in passes defended with eight, including four interceptions. He also tallied 36 tackles in run support. Junior Tim Schmidt also picked off four passes for Lycoming in 2002.

Women’s Tennis • 7-3

The College’s women’s tennis program had another successful season under the leadership of head coach Deb Holmes recording the program’s 10th consecutive winning season and qualifying for the MAC team playoffs. The pair joined forces as a doubles team and dominated the competition going undefeated on the year at 9-0. Both Temple and Moerschbacher were named first-team all-conference players. During their careers, the duo combined for 93 singles victories and 45 doubles victories.

Freshman Josemar Castillo and junior Heidi von Schwedler also had solid seasons for the Warriors. Castillo stepped into the third position in the singles ladder in her first season of collegiate tennis and posted a 7-3 mark for the year. Von Schwedler went 7-2 as Lycoming’s number four singles player. Castillo and von Schwedler played together as the Warriors’ second doubles team compiling a record of 9-3 that included a quarterfinal appearance in the MAC Doubles tournament.

Men’s Soccer • 6-11-2

The Warrior men’s soccer team entered the 2002 campaign with a roster dominated by freshmen and the results were not unexpected. Although the team showed flashes of brilliance at times during the season, a lack of consistency caused by inexperience led to a 6-11-2 mark. However, with no seniors on this year’s roster the future of the men’s soccer program looks bright under the direction of head coach Scott Kennell.

Freshman Jeff Kocher was Lycoming’s top offensive threat in 2002 scoring eight goals and assisting on nine others for a team-high 25 points. His efforts did not go unnoticed as he was named to the all-conference second-team – one of only three freshmen to be named conference all-stars. Fellow freshman Chris Mason recorded four goals and an assist during the second half of the season after moving to the attack from the defense due to injuries on the team.

In the midfield, junior Brad Martin had a strong year recording six assists to go along with one goal. Freshman Phil Kratochvil and junior tri-captain Joe Balduino were also key contributors combining for four goals and two assists on the season.

Defensively, the Warriors were led by the squads other two tri-captains, juniors Ian Kauffman and Kory Wertz. Kauffman was also an offensive threat scoring three goals and tallying an assist in 18 matches. Sophomore goalkeeper Jason Fesler also had a solid year for Lycoming recording 110 saves.

Women’s Soccer • 3-13
The Lycoming women’s soccer program was forced into a rebuilding mode last season with the late departure of former head coach Katherine Roberts. Men’s coach Scott Kennell inherited a team of just 13 student-athletes and a program in need of direction. By season’s end the Warriors’ roster had swelled to 21 strong and the team showed vast improvement that will serve as the foundation for the future.

Senior Melissa Wert was the team leading scorer with five goals and an assist on the season. Sophomore Beth Weixel added three goals and senior Angela Casselberry contributed two scores and two assists. Freshman Kaitlyn Prairie had a solid rookie campaign recording four assists and a goal from the midfield. Senior goalkeeper Angela Casselberry had a terrific year in net for Lycoming making 230 saves and stopping 86% of the shots she faced.

50 years! Hard to believe! With Ralph Marion and Dick Dingle as the movers and shakers, a record number of golden anniversary grads came back to campus for Homecoming Weekend. Check out who the new class scribes are!

The banner said it all — 1952 was the first class to enter as well as graduate from Lycoming College.

Ralph Marion also discovered that the Class of 1952 had invented the Chieftain Award; and the bronze plaque that noted each year’s Chieftain was officially filled with the 2002 award winner. Ralph led the charge and the Class of 1952 chipped in to raise $1,000 for two additional panels to the plaque that will accommodate another 50 names. Ralph invited Tricia O’Connor, the president of the Class of 2003 to the Heritage Club Breakfast on Sunday morning to present the class of 2003 with the challenge: to raise money for the next plaque when they return in 2053!

By the way, get ready now for the 55th reunion in 2007! “We’re making plans,” says Ralph.
Fifty years in a paragraph was the challenge for the 52- ers at the Heritage Club Brunch as each summed up his life since Lycoming College.

Josephine Babcock Brong worked for Bell Telephone after graduation. She then married Gene Brong and became a wife and mother of three children. She has been a volunteer for two additional panels to the plaque that will accommodate another 50 names. Ralph invited Tricia O’Connor, the president of the Class of 2003 to the Heritage Club Breakfast on Sunday morning to present the class of 2003 with the challenge: to raise money for the next plaque when they return in 2053!

By the way, get ready now for the 55th reunion in 2007! “We’re making plans,” says Ralph.
Fifty years in a paragraph was the challenge for the 52- ers at the Heritage Club Brunch as each summed up his life since Lycoming College.

Josephine Babcock Brong worked for Bell Telephone after graduation. She then married Gene Brong and became a wife and mother of three children. She has been a volunteer for the Red Cross for 24 years and also volunteers at a local hospital.

Gene Brong recalled that he and Josie had been friends in high school as well as college. He joined the Air Force after graduation and served as a bombardier on B-29s in Korea. He spent 20 years in the Air Force and retired in Nebraska. He then spent eight years in computers working for Northern Natural Gas, which became ENRON. After retiring, Gene went back to “horn tooting.” He is now very busy tooting in three Dixieland bands and in the local wind symphony.

Marjory Whiteley Cooper worked in the Konkle Library after graduation and married in 1958. She has two children and all grandchildren.

Harold Davis joined Goodyear Tire for several years, then became business manager of the Muncy School District for a time. He retired in 1991 from Commonwealth Bank and now boasts three children, eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Richard Dingle boasts that he got the last beauty from Beauty’s Run when he married his wife, Florece. They have two children. After putting in time in the service where he guarded criminals in Japan, he went to work in the textile industry. He retired from the Department of Transportation and also from the Williamsport Symphony Orchestra where he played violin. He now has close to 50 years in scouting as a volunteer.

Gilbert Love migrated to Erie after graduation and began working in social service which, he discovered, “was a good way to starve.” He switched gears and spent his career mostly in the field of purchasing.

Ralph Marion has been in Atlanta, Georgia, since 1958 working for Bell South. He remembers he left Lycoming three days before graduation with the chicken pox. Now that he is retired, he is busier than ever. He’s going off to Estonia on a mission trip. He and his wife have three children and five grandchildren.

Marian Musselman Mitchell left Lycoming early in January of 1952. She married, had four children and when the youngest was in school, got her teaching certificate. She taught for 25 years in New Jersey. Since she has retired, she has gotten back into bowling. She has 12 grandchildren and two step-grandchildren ranging in age from 3 to 21 years.

Rev. Fred Norman was already married when he entered Lycoming. His first daughter was born right before test time his freshman year. He spent 37 and 1/2 years in Illinois. Retiring, he moved to Florida where he has been a minister of visitation in the Ft. Myers area for the past 8 years. He feels great and knows he’s in good health because, he explains, he just signed a mortgage for 30 years.

Rev. John O’Neill was only in class at Lycoming College because of the GI Bill, he recalls. He married in 1954 and served as a UMC pastor for 39.6 years. Now he’s a walking advertisement for life in the Cornwall Manor Retirement Community. His 8 grandchildren range from 4 weeks to 9 years.

Lee Pannebaker married Patty Rohm ’49 and has had “many jobs” during his career. He spent 31 years with Dupont. Now an active volunteer in his church, he does the audio for the services.

Elmer Pink may be retired but he is not tired. After working for F. W. Woolworth out of Lycoming, he went into business for himself. He started a feed business and has been in investments, insurance and property development. He has four daughters and 12 grandchildren. He now spends his winters in Florida.

Eleanor Miller Snyder worked with children in social services, raised two daughters and did volunteer work. She now has four grandchildren and is a volunteer with the Pine Street Methodist Church.

Ann Acharl Thompson (accounting) on a recent visit to the Alumni office, reports that he is enjoying his retirement from the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue and continues to compose poetry and has been recognized for his compositions. He was named an “Outstanding Senior Citizen” by an organization in Lancaster that publishes The Senior News. John is the father of three sons and is currently residing in Enola, Pa.

Congratulations to Patricia and Robert J. McKernan (accounting) on the observance of their 45th wedding anniversary on August 10, 2002.

Dave Rodriguez ’53, Charlie Mitchell ’53, Roger Ludlum ’53, and Bud Moglia ’55, all charter members of the Psi Chapter of Kappa Delta Rho, participated in a reunion golf outing on September 12-13, 2002, in Spring Lake, New Jersey. Bud hosted the outing and the group was later joined by “Bobby” Anderson ’55, also a KDR brother. All are planning to attend Homecoming 2003 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Psi Chapter of KDR as well as those who will be celebrating their 50th college reunion, they encourage others to follow suit!

Rev. Carlos C. Jayne, Jr. (history) was awarded The Christine Wilson Medal for Equality and Justice on August 24, 2002. This medal, named for the first chair of the Iowa Commission on the Status of Women, is awarded to an individual who has made significant contributions to the principles of equality and justice. Rev. Jayne is currently a lobbyist for social justice issues, having retired as a “second career” United Methodist pastor and serving as Legislative Advocate for the church for almost 20 years.

During those months of refreshment, he has reconnected with three first cousins he hadn’t seen in 45 years, has met weekly with a spiritual director to reflect on the experience, has gone on a guided fly fishing trip, toured the Brooklyn Bridge (a decades-long dream from books he has read about the Roeblings), has spent a month in France with his daughter and family, being tutored in French and participating in the baptism in the American Church of Paris of his second grandson, Simon Leonard Andrew Randy, born on June 12, 2002. Rev. Robinson and his wife, Ellie, also visited friends in Germany whom Paul came to know during his junior year abroad in Goettingen.

Former Foster Child Ready to Soar

Based on an article written by Joe Farrell of the Reading Times/Eagle

“Former Foster Child is Ready to Soar,” was the title of an article written by Joe Farrell of the Reading (PA.)Times/Eagle. The article was about Mike McTeague ’01 who from the age of 4 was in foster care system, lived with three different families.

He’s amazed by the reaction he still gets when people learn he’s a “foster care kid.” If there’s one thing he’d like to do, it’s to smash the stereotype of foster kids—both their self-image, as well as the image others have of them.

McTeague has already done that. He credits his foster families with giving him love, encouragement and discipline. He found a mentor in FBI special agent Ralph Hilborn, who helped him win a $10,000 Armed Services Foundation scholarship.

He chose Lycoming because he knew a friend from high school- Azure Reaser- who was already here, and because he wanted to wrestle for Coach Crebs. Majoring in criminal justice, he also managed a B average, joined Phi Mu Delta fraternity, and spent three years as a “Big Brother.”

He put together the financing for College with the help of the Reserves GI Bill, a job at Circuit City and $35,000 in loans.

McTeague had two goals growing up: He wanted to be an FBI agent and he wanted to fly.

Last January, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corp and just completed six months of The Basic School, a boot camp for officers, at Quantico, Virginia. Now it’s on to flight school in Pensacola, Florida, for another 18 to 24 months of training. There Mike has a chance to qualify as a pilot, assuming, he is quick to note, he doesn’t wash out. It could be aerial spotters, cargo planes, helicopters or jet fighters.

“The ultimate,” he says, “is the F-18, but you have to be among the best at Basic School and flight school to qualify.”

His dream of becoming an FBI agent may wait a bit, because he’ll owe the Marines another six to eight years of active service, depending on his flight training.

McTeague has a good opinion of foster care. “I had great foster parents,” he says but admits that “there are plenty of good kids out there that don’t get the recognition or the chances that I got.”
